

Contents

An untold story	1
PART ONE: THE WAY	3
Chapter One
Point of departure	5
Once upon a time	5
Aims and limitations	7
Sources for my inquiry	9
A participatory perspective	10
Changed positions	15
An emerging perspective on critical and narrative inquiry	17
The construct of shared meaning and fidelity	19
The route ahead	21
Chapter Two
Through the lenses of hegemony and common sense	23
The intellectuals and education	24
On the construct and reconstruct of common sense	30
Common sense, identity and civil society	33
Common sense, educational texts and official knowledge	35
Towards a counter-hegemonic alternative	44
An initial bridging to the African landscape	45
PART TWO: THE LANDSCAPE	47
Chapter Three
Broad layers of influence	49
The hegemonic global perspective	49
Challenging the official knowledge of development business	55
The modern school as exported to Africa	59
Annotation: a constraining global layer for reform	63

Chapter Four
Deposits into common sense about education	67
Indigenous African education	70
Colonial education	72
Missionary schooling	73
Schooling under German colonialism	76
Schooling under South African rule	79
Education and the liberation struggle	82
Educational practices within the liberation movement	84
Annotation: historical residues	89
Chapter Five
Building a counter-hegemonic bloc	91
In a state of conflict	91
An educational alternative is moulded in exile	93
The first bricks on Namibian ground	98
Annotation: national teacher education reform in the making	108
Chapter Six
Shaping the landscape for reform	111
The international arena of teacher education	113
Education for All - the Namibian way	120
The essence of reform: learner-centred education	124
Annotation: a basis for a counter-hegemonic reform	130
Chapter Seven
Situational conditions for a war of position	133
Institutional conditions	134
Timing and internal positions	143
External support and intervention	146
The Curriculum Co-ordinating Group	152
The Basic Education Teacher Diploma - an overview	159
Annotation: situational conditions for a counter-hegemonic reform	163

PART THREE: THE STRUGGLE	165
Chapter Eight
Creating an imperative reform framework	167
The struggle over a national reform agenda	168
Towards participation and change	172
Annotation: forces at work at policy level	179
Chapter Nine
Altering programme imprints	185
From theory-into-practice to critical practitioner inquiry	186
From teaching practice to school-based studies	192
From assessment as control to assessment for development	198
Annotation: forces at work at programme level	203
Chapter Ten
Shaping institutional agency	207
Staff development for empowerment	207
Informal staff development through seminars and workshops	208
Formal staff development for teacher educators	211
An emerging trend of institutionally based staff development	220
Towards a tertiary institutional position	221
The preferential right of interpretation through evaluation	227
Annotation: forces at work at institutional level	234
PART FOUR: THE VIEW	237
Chapter Eleven
Explaining teacher education reform	239
A summative travelogue	239
The layered society	242
Identities in the intellectual war of position	244
A transposed reform in a layered society	248
In summary	257
Chapter Twelve
Reflections and a pedagogy of hope	259
Methodological reflections	259
Reflections over teacher education reform	260
Towards a pedagogy of hope	264
References	271

Appendices		291
Appendix 1.	Sources for my inquiry	291
Appendix 2.	Interviews and observations	292
Appendix 3.	Organisation of the ITTP	293
Appendix 4.	Initial panels for BETD Syllabi	294
Appendix 5.	Staff at colleges and NIED	295
Appendix 6.	TERP staff 1993 – 1998	296
Appendix 7.	TERP Support areas 1993 – 1998	297
Appendix 8.	Members in Task Force and CCG	298
Appendix 9.	The BETD programme	299
Appendix 10.	National Seminars and BETD structures	300
Appendix 11.	The Multi-layered Process	301
Appendix 12.	Extracts from the BETD Broad Curriculum	302
Appendix 13.	BETD Appraisal (workshops and seminars)	304
Appendix 14.	Assessment in the Broad Curriculum	306
Appendix 15.	Participation in staff development courses	307
Appendix 16.	Reports from Higher Diploma and Master Courses	308
Appendix 17.	Reports from the National Evaluation of the BETD	311

Figures

Figure 1.	The reform process	249
Figure 2.	BETD structure 1993 – 1995	300
Figure 3.	BETD structure 1995/96 – ff.	300